Chapter 1: What is IMLS?

Now that we understand the structure of this video, let's talk about IMLS.

VISION: A nation where individuals and communities have access to museums and libraries to learn from and be inspired by the trusted information, ideas, and stories they contain about our diverse natural and cultural heritage

MISSION: The mission of IMLS is to advance, support, and empower America's museums, libraries, and related organizations through grantmaking, research, and policy development.

- IMLS is an independent federal grant-making agency and the primary source of federal support for the nation's museums and libraries.
- The IMLS vision and mission statements were adopted as part of the agency's current strategic plan. Both emphasize that IMLS is here to support museums and libraries in their work of serving their communities.
- IMLS's vision is a nation where museums and libraries work together to transform the lives of individuals and communities.
- Our mission is to advance, support, and empower America's museums, libraries, and related organizations through grantmaking, research, and policy development.

Chapter 6: What if I'm Not Ready to Apply This Year?

- We hope that all potential applicants will take full advantage of the resources in Chapter 5 of this video and reach out to a staff member with any lingering questions.
- However, we understand that this may not be the ideal time for your institution to participate in our programs.
- If you're not ready to apply for this funding cycle, we have a couple of recommendations.

Peer Reviewing

- Peer reviewers are industry professionals who read and score grant applications.
- Gain a better understanding of what makes a proposal successful.
- www.imls.gov/grants/peer-review
- <https://www.imls.gov/webinars/webinar-potential-museum-reviewers>

- One option is to apply to become a peer reviewer.
- Peer reviewers are industry professionals who play a critical role in our award selection process by reading and scoring the grant applications.
- As a reviewer, you'll get a behind-the-scenes view of the review process and gain a better understanding of what makes a proposal successful.
- To apply to become a peer reviewer, please visit www.imls.gov/grants/peer-review and click on "Apply to Become a Museum Reviewer."
- You can also find our "Webinar for Potential Museum Reviewers" through our webinar page.

Assessment Programs

- Technical assistance programs can help you strengthen operations, care for collections, and plan for the future.
- Participating in an assessment program may be a great place to start.
- Open to small and mid-sized museums.

- Another tool that can help you prepare for the grant application process is an assessment program.
- IMLS offers two assessment programs for institutions that would like to better understand their own needs
- These are the Museum Assessment Program (MAP) and the Collections Assessment for Preservation (CAP) programs
- IMLS supports these two technical assistance programs through cooperative agreements, with the goal of helping museums strengthen their operations, identify collections care priorities, and plan for the future.
- Participating in an assessment program is a great starting point for small and mid-sized museums. The documents that result from these assessments can be used to implement future IMLS grant applications.

Museum Assessment Program (MAP)

Goal: To help small and mid-sized museums of all types strengthen operations, plan for the future, and meet professional standards

Categories: Organizational; Collections Stewardship; Education & Interpretation; Community & Audience Engagement

Administered by: American Alliance of Museums

Applications Due: February 1, 2025

Visit: <https://www.aam-us.org/map>

- The Museum Assessment Program, or MAP, is funded by IMLS and managed by the American Alliance of Museums. It is available to small and mid-sized museums of all types, and its purpose is to help organizations strengthen their operations, plan for the future, and meet professional standards through self-study and a consultative site visit from an expert peer reviewer. MAP participants can choose from four assessment types.
 - The Organizational Assessment;
 - The Collections Stewardship Assessment;
 - The Education & Interpretation Assessment;
 - And The Community & Audience Engagement Assessment.
- To learn more, please visit www.aam-us.org/map or call 202-289-9118. The next application deadline is expected to be February 1, 2025. To be notified when the next application period is open and to receive updates about the MAP program, please send your contact information to map@aam-us.org.

Collections Assessment for Preservation (CAP)

Goal: To provide small and mid-sized museums with prioritized recommendations for improving the care of their collections

Administered by: The Foundation for Advancement in Conservation (FAIC)

Visit: www.culturalheritage.org/cap

Contact: cap@culturalheritage.org

- Also funded by IMLS but administered by the Foundation for Advancement in Conservation (FAIC), the Collections Assessment for Preservation program, or CAP for short, provides small and mid-sized museums with support for general conservation assessments. These assessments consist of a self-study and a two-day onsite visit by assessors who specialize in collections conservation and building preservation.
 - CAP is often the first step for small and mid-sized museums that wish to improve the condition of their collections.
 - A CAP assessment can assist your institution by helping you decide how to invest limited funding and staff time; facilitating the development of a long-term preservation plan; and serving as a fundraising tool for future conservation projects. For more information about the CAP program and application process, please visit the FAIC's website at www.culturalheritage.org/cap, or email cap@culturalheritage.org.
